Writing the Review of Related Literature and Bibliography

BACKGROUND INFORMATION FOR THE LEARNER

A review of related literature (RRL) is a comprehensive breakdown of existing literature related to the topic of a research study. In writing an RRL, we discuss about information and findings from existing studies which are relevant to our topic.

The following are the steps in writing a literature review:

- 1) Narrow your topic and choose papers accordingly;
- 2) Search for literature;
- 3) Read the chosen articles and assess them;
- 4) Organize the chosen papers by searching for patterns and by developing subtopics;
- 5) Develop a thesis or purpose statement;
- 6) Write the paper;
- 7) Review your work.

Here are some of the basic guidelines that we have to remember when writing the RRL:

- 1) Find and use at least 10 credible sources. These may include newspaper articles, encyclopedia entries, journals, credible websites, books, interviews and surveys.
- 2) Be objective. Avoid personal biases in writing and portrayal of the information you gather from the sources.
- 3) Do not use personal pronouns (first and second persons), such as “i,” “me,” “my,” “we,” “our,” “you,” etc.
- 4) Do not make an argument. The RRL’s purpose is to review the various perspectives in the sources you locate and use.
- 5) Use quotations (direct/indirect) or paraphrases from your sources in order to support your claims and to show various perspectives on your research. It is also significant in avoiding plagiarism.

What is plagiarism and how can we avoid it?

Oxford’s Learner Dictionary defines plagiarism as “an act of copying another person’s ideas, words or work and pretend that they are your own.” Our review of related literature MUST be free of plagiarism, so we should always acknowledge our references by using quotation marks and paraphrasing whenever needed.

Citing the Sources in APA Format (In-Text)

In acknowledging the authors of the articles you use when writing the RRL, you will be using the APA style. Each time you discuss a study by restating findings or information, include a citation in parentheses. For example: Fear of failing has been found to motivate some students (Garcia, 2008).

If there are two or more authors, list the names, separated by commas. Write the “&” symbol before the last name. For example: Fear of failing has been found to motivate some students (Garcia, Santos, & Bautista, 2008).

If you have to cite them again (the 2 or more authors), just list the first name and “et al.” For example: Fear of failing has been found to motivate some students (Garcia et al., 2008).

LEARNING COMPETENCY

- a) Establish the purpose and importance of writing a good review of related literature that conforms with acceptable guidelines.;
- b) Presents written review of literature with proper citations;
- c) Follows ethical standards/principles in writing and conducting Research study;
- d) Organize sources using appropriate bibliographic format;
- e) Cites related literature using standard style/format (APA- American Psychological Association)

ACTIVITIES

ACTIVITY 1

Directions: Put a check (✓) if the source is credible (can be trusted). Put a cross (✗) if it is non-credible (cannot be trusted).

- | | |
|-----------------------------|---|
| _____ 1. blogs | _____ 6. newspaper article |
| _____ 2. books | _____ 7. out-to-date materials |
| _____ 3. encyclopedia entry | _____ 8. posts from social media (i.e., Facebook) |
| _____ 4. forums | _____ 9. sites that provide biased information |
| _____ 5. journal article | _____ 10. Survey |

ACTIVITY 2

Direction: Answer the following questions briefly.

1) What kind of sources should we use when writing a review of related literature? Give examples.

2) What are the pronouns that we should avoid using in writing our literature review?

3) Is using quotations and paraphrases important? How does it affect the credibility of our review of studies?

ACTIVITY 3

Directions:

- 1) Think and decide of a topic of interest. This may be an area of research you would like to undertake.
- 2) Do a quick evaluation of 3 or more articles you wish to use for your literature review. Evaluate them in the following aspects:
 - a) “Is it relevant to your topic of interest?”
 - b) “Is it dated?” (Do not cite facts or statistics that are not dated.)
 - c) “Is the author credible?” (Avoid non-credible sources.)
 - d) “Does the article come with a bibliography?” (This gives you an idea whether the author has referred to other sources and helps to validate the content of the article.)
 - e) “Is the article biased in any way?”
- 3) Read each article and summarize what it says in your area of study.
- 4) Write a literature review on your topic of interest.
